The Importance of Flu Vaccination

December 4 through 10 is National Influenza Vaccination Week. The North Dakota Department of Health is reminding all North Dakotans of the importance of receiving the flu vaccine, according to Molly Sander, Immunization Program manager for the Department of Health.

Influenza vaccinations are available at physician offices, local public health units and pharmacies. Six cases of influenza have been reported to the North Dakota Department of Health so far this season. The flu season typically does not peak in North Dakota until after the New Year, so there is still sufficient time for people to get vaccinated.

"The flu vaccine protects against three flu viruses that research indicates will cause the most illness," said Sander. "This season's flu vaccine protects against the same strains of flu as last year, but because immunity may wane, getting vaccinated each year is the best way to protect yourself and your family each flu season."

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that everyone be vaccinated against the flu, especially the following:

All children ages 6 months through 18 years; All adults ages 50 and older; Residents of long-term care facilities; Pregnant women; American Indians; People of any age who have long-term health problems, such as: Heart disease; Lung disease; Kidney disease; Diabetes; Asthma; Anemia; Weakened immune systems due to HIV/AIDS and cancer treatments; Breathing problems due to neuromuscular disorders; Morbidly obese; People who could spread the disease to those at high risk – such as health-care workers, out-of-home caregivers and household contacts – also should be vaccinated.

For information about vaccine availability, people should contact their local public health unit, health-care provider or pharmacist. For information about influenza, visit www.ndflu.com.

REMEMBER: The flu vaccine can protect not only you, but everyone around you.

NDSU rep to visit ar

A representative from the Office of University will visit Towner High School.

The representative will help high school students earn college credit from one of the premier universities in the state. Sander shared about NDSU's leading academic programs and how students can receive financial aid and how students can participate in research organizations. "NDSU truly is an excellent university," said President D. R. Anderson. "NDSU is a caring, forward-thinking university that is committed to leadership in providing educational opportunities for all students."

NDSU has about 14,400 students and offers 100 baccalaureate programs. Additionally, NDSU offers 63 master's degree programs and 100 Ph.D. programs. The Carnegie Commission ranked NDSU as one of the elite "Research University/Doctoral" institutions. NDSU represents the 108 most successful public universities in the United States. NDSU is the first and only university in North Dakota to receive a "premier" or "top tier" prestigious categorization.

"NDSU is a vibrant metropolitan area with a wealth of opportunities for students and faculty alike. This visit by an admissions representative is an opportunity for high school students to learn more about an education from NDSU."

The NDSU main campus is located on the eastern edge of North Dakota. The main campus is home to about 200,000 books and regularly receives national acclaim. NDSU has appeared in the top 10 college town rankings for the past several years. Cass County is the "best" county in North Dakota as ranked by the metro area of Fargo, Moorhead, Grand Forks and towns earning "2011 People's Choice" group KaBOOM.
