UPRISE

This present-oriented mentality casts dark shadows over our future. In fact, if we stay on this course, there may be no future in our future. God has not guaranteed our existence in perpetuity.

The first shadow is the inability of the electorate to make informed decisions. With the advent of electronic media, people have lapsed into ignorance about public affairs, banking on the total misrepresenta-

The third shadow is the "dumbing down" of our education system. Instead of making education a joint responsibility of parents and teachers, we keep blaming the failure of children on the schools. Most of the criticism during the Bush and the Obama administrations has been directed at schools while it is the parents who need to be more engaged and that would take a generations. On the major issues of the day, the present-oriented electorate can no longer think into the future and realize that this generation must experience inconvenience and sacrifice to secure a brighter future for our children and grandchildren. Unless we start making some hard decisions, there is not much future in the future.

Area students graduate from college

Students from the area were among the 1,362 students to graduate from North Dakota State University this spring.

Those from the area include: Lance G. Fulton, bachelor of science in management information systems, Beach; Daniel James Duletski, doctor of pharmacy, and Katelyn Rose Kordon, bachelor of science in biological sciences, both of Belfield; Melissa Mary Weinreis*, bachelor of science in dietetics, Golva; and Travis Lloyd Weinreis, bachelor of science in agricultural systems management, of Sentinel Butte.

The asterisk denotes graduation with honors.

Graduates of the University of Mary this spring included local students: Angela Abrams, master of science in counseling, and Caitlin Adorni (Cum Laude), bachelor of arts, both from Wibaux, Mont.; Daisy Herold, master of science in counseling, from Belfield; and Whitney Hardy, bachelor of science from Golva.
