Potential Early Frosts

FARGO — Can you imagine frost this time of year? Actually, such a thing would not be all that unusual. On Aug. 20, 2004, it was 34 degrees in Fargo and 32 degrees in Grand Forks. Scattered frost occurred up and down the Red River Valley. The Fargo area also had scattered frost on Aug. 27, 1982, when the official temperature reached 33 degrees.

Other modern day early frosts happened on Aug. 13, 1964, when it reached 33 degrees; and also Aug. 14, 1965, when it reached 35 degrees. 1965 had another chilly morning when it hit 36 degrees on Aug. 28. All of these mornings had areas of frost despite official air temperatures slightly above freezing. Of course, the official airport temperature does not represent all locations. Blades of grass in an open field, car windshields and low spots in the landscape are often several degrees cooler than the "official" reading.
