Mr. Young presented background information and noted a similar group of individuals in Mandan successfully collected the adequate number of signatures to be placed on the June ballot in 2024. Mr. Young noted supporters in Bismarck have collected approximately 1,100 signatures, several hundred short of the 1,500+ signatures required to be placed on the June ballot in Bismarck. Mr. Young requested the Commission consider adding the Home Rule Charter Amendment to the June ballot so it would align with similar efforts in Mandan. Mr. Young noted that if the measure were to pass in both communities, the tax collections would begin simultaneously. Mayor Schmitz expressed support for the concept but raised concerns about the potential North Dakota property tax initiative. He noted that if it is approved, municipalities would be forced to modify budgeting processes to supplement the loss of property tax collections. The general consensus of the Commission is to encourage the sponsoring committee to continue collecting signatures, recognizing that the deadline for the November general election will be 60 days before the general election day. 6. Other Business. Adjourn. There being no further business to discuss, the meeting adjourned at 8:07 PM. Read About the History of this Area: Keith Norman

It took a lot of people to build a railroad back in the 1890s.

Newspapers in Dickey County and the surrounding area described the process for the construction of the Soo Line west of Kulm in September 1898 editions of local newspapers.

First, a crew would have to up the grade using horse-drawn equipment. A Fresno scraper was usually drawn by two horses. The teamster walked behind what looks like a large shovel. By raising or lowering the handles, the driver could control the depth of soil taken by the scraper. By raising the handles, the soil could be dumped on what was to become the track bed. Rocks were a hazard for the operators of a Fresno scraper. If the cutting edge of the shovel hit a rock it could flip the Fresno and could knock the driver off his feet.

Building the road bed was just one step to laying track. A special train, with about 100 workers was next. This train would have looked a little odd to most people. You see, the engine was in the middle of the string of cars. At the front of the train was the derrick car or crane car. This was followed by a flat car carrying rails and another carrying ties all in front of the steam engine and usually two or more tenders to supply enough coal and water to keep the steam engine going all day.

First, some of that 100 man crew would carry the ties from the car and place them on the grade.

Then the derrick would pickup a rail and swing it around and place it on the ties where another crew spiked the rails down.

At that point, a flagman positioned at the top of the derrick would signal the train engineer to move the whole assembly forward. This flagman was one of the most important men on the crew because the engineer couldn't see the newly placed track in front of them.

Behind the engine were cars where the spikes, bolts and tools were stored. The whole process was configured so the heavier the item, the closer it was where it would be placed or used. The final car in the train carried telegraph poles and wire.

Even as the track was being placed, the telegraph line along side the track was being built. To test the telegraph line, it was kept active even as it was being built. This also allowed the crew to keep in touch with its base. In this case that was Kulm.

Railroad histories say most crews tried to lay at least one mile of track per day although many exceeded that. Along with the track crews, there would have been dirt crews building up the grade using Fresno scrapers and other tools and bridge crews building structures to cross streams.

Even at its most efficient, it would have taken several hundred men working hard to build a railroad track that may cover a couple of hundred miles over a summer. It is a good thing labor was cheap back then. I don't think we could build railroads now.

Despite the cold weather, the ground is mostly frost-free

By John Wheeler

FARGO — According to the North Dakota Ag Weather Network sensors, all of the deep frost is out of the ground across most of North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota. The recent snow and cold weather left the top several inches of soil around 32 degrees, but below a foot or so, the ground is above freezing. This means recent snow, along with future precipitation, will mostly soak into the soil, hopefully delivering a nice shot of water to the somewhat dry topsoil after a largely snow-free winter.

The near absence of frost will allow the ground to begin to warm readily once the weather actually warms up. However, we should not expect green lawns any time soon. Grass will not come out of dormancy until the soil temperature reaches around 50 degrees, and it will take considerably more warm weather to do that.

John Wheeler is Chief Meteorologist for WDAY Television.

DRINKING WATER STATE REVOLVING FUND PROJECT NUMBER: 4700637-02
The North Dakota Department of Environmental Quality (NDEQ) has conducted a review of the proposed Water Supply and Treatment Improvements for the City of Medina in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (40 CFR Part 6). The NDEQ has determined that this project is eligible for a categorical exclusion and is exempt from further substantive environmental review. Because the proposed project meets the criteria for a categorical exclusion, a full Finding of No Significant Impact and Environment tal Assessment will not be required. Following is a description of the proposed project and a brief statement of how the project meets the criteria for a categorical exclusion. The proposed project consists of improvements to the City's water treatment facility. The water treatment facility has been in continuous service since 2005. Many apparatuses and equipment are reaching the end of their useful life and have begun to show signs of aging. Should any of the equipment go down, the treatment facility will need to be offline for repairs which would leave the city without water. Emergency situations will also cause issues as there are no back-up generators for the water treatment facility and well pumps. The proposed project will address any equipment that is currently at the end of its useful life and allow the water treatment facility to continue to operate. It will alleviate any associated health hazards that could be caused by an operation outage. The City of Medina has applied for a Drinking Water State Revolving Fund to finance the project. The city has the legal authority and financial and administrative capability to construct the proposed improvements. This project is being granted an exclusion because the improvements will occur entirely in the alignment of previously disturbed areas. No previously undisturbed areas will be affected by the construction activities. The North Dakota State Historic Preservation Officer has concluded that no historic properties will be affected by this project provided it takes place in the location and manner described in the documentation and provided all borrow comes from an approved source (ND SHPO Ref.: 23-0642). It has been determined that exempting the proposed project from further review under the National Environmental Policy Act will not result in adverse impacts to the population or area of Medina and Stutsman County. The documentation to support this decision will be on file and available for public review at the NDEQ, Division of Municipal Facilities. Comments concerning this decision may be addressed to Danielle Peltier, Environmental Engineer, Division of Municipal Facilities, North Dakota Department of Environmental Quality, 4201 Normandy Street, Bismarck, ND, 58503-1324. Dated the 26th of March, 2024. David J. Bruschwein, P.E. Director Division of Municipal Facilities (Apr. 3, 2024)

A public hearing will be held at 7:00 PM April 15 at the Buchanan School to review and amend the zoning map for the City of Buchanan. Posted by Mayor Kim Lees

DAKOTA DATEBOOK:
Medina

April 1, 2024 — The village of Medina, North Dakota incorporated in 1906 and it became a city on this date, April 1, 1946. Established on the railroad line, Medina once called itself “The Biggest Little Town on the Northern Pacific.”

But that’s not Medina’s real claim to fame. Medina will always be known as the site of the February 18, 1983, shootout between tax protestor Gordon Kahl and several law enforcement officials who were attempting to arrest him. Two US Marshals, Kenneth Muir and Robert Chesire, were killed that day, and three other law officers wounded. Gordon Kahl escaped the scene that day in a Medina police officer's car and was eventually tracked down in Arkansas where he was killed in June of 1983 in yet another shootout.

DAKOTA DATEBOOK: Sinerius and Runion

April 2, 2024 — Around 1941, Fred Sinerius lost his farm to the Bank of North Dakota and moved in with his son, Bennie, six miles west of Beulah. Sinerius hadn't left his home empty-handed; he took some storm windows, screen doors and some lumber with him. The bank sent 29-year-old V.P. Wolf to Bennie's farm to look for these items, and Mercer County Deputy Sheriff Joseph Runion went with him.

LaMoure County Meeting

The LaMoure County Commissioners met for their first meeting of April with everyone present.

Road Superintendent Darrick Nitschke said he found a used plow truck in Fargo he would like to get. He suggested that they cancel the order for the new one from Nelson International that was ordered January of 2022. The county still did not have a delivery date for the new truck. The commissioners agreed to cancel the new truck order and purchase the used one. Darrick found two used semi trucks to purchase. They will use the money from the county sale and insurance money to purchase them. The county has hired another full time employee. The employee is from Edgeley. The county has applied for three projects from the Flex Funding account from the state. He will be getting a demonstration for repaving from a company in a couple of weeks.

The commissioners approved a tax abatement for a homestead tax credit and the canceling of three checks that Treasurer Worrel presented. These will be turned over to the state unclaimed property.

The commissioners approved having the trim on the courthouse painted. The price came in at a little over $88,000.00. It was budgeted to be done for $80,000.00. They approved the overage.

The county expressed their gratitude to State Radio for their effort in helping the coun-

Kramlich Tests His Skill at National Combine

By: Sarah Gackle, KPS Echo Advisor

Joseph Kramlich has always been a standout athlete, whether in track, golf, football, or basketball. His hard work in and out of season earned him a recent opportunity to participate in a high school football combine in San Antonio, Texas in early January 2024.

In our agricultural context of rural North Dakota, “football” and “combine” may not seem to fit together in a sentence, but in the context of high-achieving sports and scholarship competition, it is a well-known rite of passage. The combine is an invitation-only opportunity to the top 600 9-11th grade athletes in the United States. The athletes are tested on various skills such as 40-yard dash, 5-10-5 shuttles, vertical jump, broad jump, and more. The combine maintains official records and then makes the results available to colleges and universities across the country.

However, the combine isn't just about talent. Participants spend half their time in one-on-one coaching and seminar lectures learning about the importance of grades, how to balance life as a college athlete, and what to expect as they begin the recruiting process.

In July 2023, Kramlich attended a camp in Naples, FL run by Football University, an athletic training organization that boasts alums like Christian McCaffrey (RB, 49ers), Trevor Lawrence (QB, Jaguars), Nick Chubb (RB, Browns), and Najee Harris (RB, Steelers).

Eggs Are All They Are Cracked Up to Be

“Do you want a bagel with scrambled eggs and cheese?” my neighbor asked.

Of course, I did. Scrambled eggs are one of my favorite foods starting from when I was a toddler.

My neighbor and I were going shopping that morning. Eggs were just the ticket for sustained energy.

However, that energy boost may have affected how much I purchased. I zipped around several stores with my cart and kept finding things I liked.

We had lunch later, and I had no problem taking half of my lunch home. I was still full from breakfast.

Researchers have shown that having eggs for breakfast may reduce the amount of food we eat later in the day. A study published in 2020 examined the effects of two different breakfast meals on later hunger for 50 overweight or obese participants.

The study participants’ meal choices were eggs and toast, or toast with cereal and milk. Those who had high-quality protein such as eggs in the morning reduced their food consumption at lunch compared with higher-carbohydrate meals such as cereal.

However, if you are on a special diet, be sure to work with your healthcare provider.

In my work I often am asked about eggs. How would you answer these questions that I have received through the years?

1. “My eggs expired two days ago according to the date on the carton. Is it safe to use the eggs?”
2. “Why did my hard-boiled eggs turn green around the yolk?”
3. “I have a recipe for ice cream that calls for raw eggs. Will freezing kill the bacteria?”

These are the answers based on national safety recommendations.

1. Yes, fresh eggs are safe to use for three to five weeks after you purchased them, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The date on the carton is usually a sell-by date for the store.

For safety and quality, eggs should be kept refrigerated. In fact, stores and restaurants must receive eggs at their door at a temperature of 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

2. The green halo on hard-cooked eggs is due to a natural reaction between the iron in egg yolk and the sulfur in the egg white. It is not harmful but is not very attractive in your deviled eggs.

Note that I called them “hard-cooked” eggs. Prolonged boiling promotes the green color.

The Egg Board recommends placing eggs in a saucepan in a single layer. Add cold water to cover by 1 inch, then heat over high heat just to boiling.

Remove from the heat and cover the pan. Allow to stand in hot water for 12 minutes for large eggs. Drain and serve warm, or cool completely in ice water.

Other people create perfect eggs in an “egg pod” appliance or in a multifunction cooker. Follow the manufacturer’s directions.

3. Eating raw or under-cooked eggs poses a safety risk. Freezing doesn’t kill bacteria such as salmonella. Either find a recipe that does not call for raw eggs, or replace the raw eggs with pasteurized eggs available in the shell or in liquid form.

I sometimes am a lucky recipient of farm-fresh eggs from friends that raise chickens. In many cities, you can raise your own backyard chickens if you follow the city ordinances.

If you are inspired, a group of NDSU Extension agents and specialists created a new guide called the “Beginners Guide to Raising Chickens.” Search for that title to learn more.

Lately, we have been hearing about “bird flu” that can affect poultry.

“Bird flu,” known as avian influenza, is not a food safety issue, and poultry is safe to eat. Always cook poultry and eggs thoroughly. Be aware of state and federal guidance and updates.

See <http://www.cdc.gov/flu/avian-flu/avian-flu-summary.htm> [5] for details.

Are you hungry for a breakfast dish that also works for any meal of the day?

SAUSAGE, EGG AND CHEESE BREAKFAST BAKE

16 ounces hash browns, fresh or frozen (thawed)

Salt (optional)

12 ounces breakfast sausage links, cut into chunks (or chopped ham)

1/2 cups onion, chopped

1/2 cups red bell pepper, chopped

2 cups colby-jack or cheddar cheese (low-fat or fat-free), shredded

6 eggs

1/2 cup milk, fat-free or low-fat

1/2 teaspoon black pepper

Preheat oven to 350 F.

Thaw hash browns in a microwave oven if needed. Cut links into small pieces, then brown sausage in a frying pan.

Add onion and pepper to the pan and saute until softened.

Set aside. Spray a 9- by 9-inch casserole dish. Spread half of the hash browns in the pan. If desired, sprinkle potatoes lightly with salt.

Top the potatoes with half of the sausage, onion and pepper mixture. Top with 1 cup of shredded cheese. Repeat layers. Sprinkle the top with remaining cheese. Whisk together eggs, milk and seasonings. Pour egg mixture over the layers and swirl gently to penetrate layers. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes or until eggs are set and temperature reaches 160 F.

Makes six servings. Each serving has 340 calories, 16 grams (g) fat, 30 g protein, 18 g carbohydrate, 2 g fiber and 720 milligrams sodium.

Efficiently Feeding Hay to Cattle

Anyone who has spent a significant amount of time with me knows that I am all about efficiency in life. That may be finding a more efficient way to accomplish a task, making a long road trip worth it by running multiple errands at once, or reducing feed waste through better feeding strategy. Efficiently feeding hay has come to the forefront of my mind recently as I look into ways to feed sheep. They are notorious for wasting hay if it is fed in a bale feeder. This is not unlike cattle, who waste about 25% of each bale when feed using a bale feeder. That is a lot of money being wasted and can make the difference between a successful operation and one that is struggling or fails.

Feeding hay efficiently starts with the storage of hay, not at feeding time. Although not practical at a large scale, storing hay indoors or under a roof can greatly reduce spoilage loss. Since indoor storage for all of your hay is not practical, there are other measures that you can take to reduce spoilage loss. Net wrap protects bales from water better than twine by helping to shed more of the water. Avoid stacking bales during the summer. The interior bales in a stack tend to have high spoilage loss due to water that accumulated during rains.

When using a round bale feeder, limit access time to the feeder. When given free choice access, cattle waste a significant amount of the hay available. Limiting the cattle to an eight to twelve hour window of access in a 24hr period can

Datebook,

...Fred Sinerius didn’t appreciate the visit, and when Wolf and Runion spied the missing articles in Bennie’s shed, he grabbed a shotgun and shot them both.

Runion pretended he was dead as Sinerius finished off Wolf with a rifle. Runion then managed to crawl to a neighboring farm for help, but he died at noon, on this date in 1941, less than 24 hours later. Sinerius gave up without a fight and was given a life-sentence.

April 3, 2024 — The risks of being a grocer were made evident on this day in 1934 when the Fargo Forum ran a story on the bizarre hazards facing Red Owl grocer E. D. Branigan.

Branigan, manager of the Fargo Red Owl store, had been a grocery clerk for decades and was conditioned for the experience that he encountered several days earlier involving tropical fruit and fauna.

While working in the produce department that week, Branigan was approached by a customer requesting some fresh bananas. The grocer quickly found the latest banana shipment and reached in to the box to grab a bunch for the customer. As Branigan pulled his arm out of the box, he felt a painful sting on the end of his finger. He immediately dropped the reduce waste by 15%. This is best accomplished by providing enough space for the cattle to all eat at the same time. The success of this method relies on your ability to keep the cattle away from the bale feeders consistently, so requires adequate fencing.

Limit feeding hay, or really any feed material to cattle, is the most efficient way. Successful limit feeding requires a little more management in order to ensure the cattle are being feed adequately. Utilize the expertise of a nutritionist or extension agent to help you ensure proper nutrition. Limit feeding is also dependent on having enough bunk space, if there is not enough space for all of the cattle to eat at once, some of the cattle will not receive enough feed. When calculating required bunk space, account for two linear feet of bunk for each mature cow. Grinding the hay and feeding with a wagon or using a bale processor are the most efficient means of limit feeding cows. Another option for smaller operations that cannot justify that equipment is to roll the bales out on frozen ground. This method only works if you have adequate space to roll out the bales needed and should not be utilized if the ground has thawed out. Rolling bales out on thawed ground results in large amounts of waste as the cows trample hay into the mud. As with all feeding systems, monitor the body condition scores of the cows and adjust feed accordingly. The final point is to ensure you match the feed quality and amount to the gestation period of the group being feed. Cows in the last trimester and the first month of lactation, have higher energy requirements that at other stages.

banana bunch, and dozens of different ants and spiders scrambled from the fruit. Nearby employees quickly killed the insects, but Branigan, unaware of which of the tropical bugs had bitten his hand, hurried to tie a string around the infected finger in order to slow the circulation of the blood.

A doctor was called who cut the finger open in order to apply an oxidizing agent in order to counteract any poison that may have been injected. Branigan reported that the sting was a “terrific shock and had a weakening effect.” Banana spiders, ants, and tarantulas were among the insects and arachnids that had run from the dropped bananas, none of which were new to grocer Branigan.

In fact, the Fargo incident was Branigan’s third encounter with tropical bugs. As a young man, he had come across a giant banana spider while working at a grocery store in Minneapolis. Although the spider bit Branigan, it was not of the poisonous variety and the man escaped unharmed. In 1922, Branigan was working at a store in Milwaukee when he found another large, brown banana spider. “This one didn’t bite him and he posed for a newspaper cameraman with the creature perched on a bunch of bananas.”

A Fee for Fido?

Pet ownership can be one of the most rewarding experiences we're able to enjoy in life. It can also be quite expensive. Once you add up all the associated costs, keeping a pet isn't cheap these days. For animal lovers in Colorado, it could become even more expensive if a state politician gets her way.

According to reports, House Bill 24-1163 has proposed a tax be levied against every non-livestock animal kept in the state, an idea which has raised howls and ruffled more than a few feathers among folks there. Its sponsor, Regina English (D), however, insists it's all about ensuring animal welfare and responsibility. Critics call it a "draconian" money grab.

The bill proposed that owners register all pets in a (yet to be established) state-run system and pay annual fees. The so-called Pet Animal Registration System would require $8.50 for pets that have a registered caregiver, and $16 for those animals which haven't been neutered or spayed. If the animal doesn't have a registered caregiver, the fee rises to $25 each. This all adds up for those with more than one pet, and even more so for breeders, sellers or even animal shelters, with those people being required to pay the fees for any animal more than six months old in their possession.

Everything from invertebrates to fish, amphibians to reptiles, and birds, cats, and doggies too are covered under the proposed legislation. Critics have pointed out that even a good ol' fashioned ant farm would require a significant annual fee.

All of this would be administered under the Department of Agriculture and would come with heavy fines for non-compliance. These fines could equate to $100 per unregistered animal, with a cap of about $10k (imagine an aquarium with 100 unregistered fishes).

When asked why this new form of taxation is necessary, Ms. English insists that it's all about connecting pets with their registered caregivers in case of emergency, an explanation many find dubious at best. In the end, many have called this a form of government overreach, an onerous financial burden without justification, and, worse still, a likely barrier to those wanting to adopt pets in the first place.

When looking through the Colorado legislative website, I found the bill with a status that simply said "Introduced", followed by "Lost". I assume this means that the proposal has failed, at least for the moment. Still, I'm admittedly concerned by what seems to have been an attempt to turn pet ownership into a luxury that's only available to those with extra money to spend. Taxing the love and enjoyment of animals just doesn't seem fair to me.

I'll let you know if anything like this appears in our own legislature, although I feel relatively confident that our representatives in Bismarck know better. All the same, it might be good financial planning to go ahead and make sure your ants and frogs are all properly neutered and spayed!

Obituaries

Timothy Robert Hazelton

April 14, 1954 ~
March 29, 2024

Timothy Robert Hazelton, 69, of Jamestown ND peacefully passed away in his sleep at home in the early morning of March 29, 2024.

Tim was born April 14, 1954, to Robert and Christine (Lantz) Hazelton in Ellendale, ND. He was raised and enjoyed life as a small-town boy in Edgeley, ND, where he learned early on to work hard and get the job done. He did carpentry for years with training from his father and grandfather, Lyndon. Tim has always been a sports enthusiast, enjoying slow pitch as well as fast pitch softball, bowling and golf. Many friends were gained during his participating years. He always found time to have fun and his sense of humor was never understood by his wife but certainly enjoyed by many. Tim enjoyed all aspects of deer hunting and especially enjoyed the sausage making with friends. He was definitely better at hunting than fishing.

Surviving Tim is his wife, Elaine, children Colin (Kristi) and Justin (Annette) born to him and Rachael in a prior marriage, stepson Nathan Quick and siblings Janet (Dennis Wilhelm), Renee and Robin. He was graced with the privilege of grandchildren Justice, Jaidyn, Maison, Hallee, Ty, Parker, Zach and MacKenzie. In addition, he had nephews Andy and Joe and niece Jennifer. He was preceded in death by both parents.

Tim has always enjoyed the simple life and didn't require a lot to bring him happiness. Who would have guessed in his later years that his heart went to the dogs, lastly Bella and Koda, the yard barkers. How many hours per day were shared curled up with a blanket in the recliner.

May the memory of Tim's quiet yet wonderful life continue to inspire us to embrace simplicity, kindness and the beauty that can be found in the moments we often overlook. May he rest in peace surrounded by the serenity he cherished.

Grave site services will take place at the Dazey Cemetery, Dazey, ND at 11:00 AM on Saturday, April 06, 2024. Lunch will be served immediately following at the Dazey Community Hall. We encourage you to come with a smile and remember the good ole days.

Tears can heal, memories can comfort and love lives on forever.

Why do we choose the foods we like?

Another Easter has come and gone—a heartfelt appreciation to the parents and grandparents who brought their kids to the gym last weekend. I hoped to have it in the park, but Mother Nature had other plans. I fondly remember having a chocolate rabbit every Easter as a kid. My parents had to ration it, or it would have lasted long past lunchtime. I definitely had a sweet tooth and a few cavities as a kid.

Speaking of chocolate, people seem to have a strong preference for either dark or milk chocolate. What is the main reason people choose the foods they do? Are you thinking about nutrition, food safety or cost? Yes, they play a role, but taste or flavor is the top reason. Flavorful food can be healthful, budget-friendly and, of course, safe to consume. During March, which is National Nutrition Month, add extra flavor with herbs and spices when you cook.

You can leave out the salt and use spices and herbs to cut the sodium. Herbs? Spice? More than a few of us are confused if it is a herb or spice. Herbs are leaves from low-growing shrubs. Herbs include parsley, chives, thyme, basil, dill, rosemary, sage, and others. Spices are from plant material other than leaves. Spices may be from bark (cinnamon), buds (cloves), roots (ginger, onion, garlic) and seeds (mustard seeds). Most cookbooks have lots of ways to use spices. If you are not sure where to use the herbs or spices in your cupboard, try these ideas to add flavor to veggies. Basil is an excellent complement to tomatoes. Curry powder, my favorite flavor, adds a mellow spiciness to cabbage, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, and cauliflower. Dill is not only for pickles but also for green beans and peas. We often had it on potatoes, pasta, and other dishes in Russia.

In our rural areas, it is not always easy to have fresh herbs, so I often use dried herbs in my kitchen. When doing so, follow the general rule when substituting dried herbs for fresh: ½ teaspoon dried herbs = ¼ teaspoon ground herbs = 2 to 3 teaspoons freshly minced herbs. Help keep them fresh and flavorful by storing spices in a tightly covered container in a cool, dry place. Keep them away from heat sources such as a dishwasher or stove. That is a difficult choice, given that they are so convenient right next to the stove, but the flavors will last much longer.

Register for the spring 2024 online Nourish course! Participants in the series will learn how to eat more nutritiously and be more physically active to reduce their risk of developing chronic diseases. Self-paced online modules begin April 8th. Participants are asked to sign up for a series of seven weekly or biweekly classes. Each class will focus on one topic, such as how to keep your eyes healthy. NATIONAL PUBLIC HEALTH WEEK IS APRIL 4-10

BISMARCK, N.D. - The North Dakota Department of Health (NDDoH) is pleased to support National Public Health Week, running April 4-10, as a thank you to local public health providers across the state. This year's National Public Health Week theme is "Public Health is Where You Are."

"In our state, access to health care is a major hurdle in rural areas," said Dr. Nizar Wehbi, North Dakota State Health Officer. "Local Public Health Units are critical in bridging that gap and making health care and related services more accessible to all North east outbreaks such as the COVID-19 pandemic, measles, natural disasters and disasters caused by human activity. Public health action--together with scientific and technological advances--has played a major role in reducing and, in some cases, eliminating the spread of infectious disease, and in establishing today's disease surveillance and control systems.

Governor Burgum Proclaims April Second Chance Month

BISMARCK, ND –Governor Doug Burgum has proclaimed April Second Chance Month in North Dakota to recognize the reform and rehabilitation of criminal justice-involved individuals.

Charles Colson, former White House counsel, used his second chance following his incarceration to found Prison Fellowship, the nation's largest outreach to prisoners and their families. Prison Fellowship believes that a restorative approach to prisoners, former prisoners, and all those affected by crime and incarceration can make communities safer and healthier. Second Chance Month coincides with the anniversary of the death of Colson on April 21, 2012.

"North Dakota is a leader in understanding that reentry begins the day someone enters the system, not the day of release," said Dan Kingery, Executive VP of Prison Fellowship. "We're so grateful to the Governor and the North Dakota Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation for their partnership in investing in the lives and potential of those behind bars, who are seeking to live out a second chance."

2024 Youth Financial Literacy Month

April is Youth Financial Literacy Month. To celebrate this event, area youth learned the importance of saving. The Youth Financial Literacy program, through NDSU Extension, aims to teach students positive money behaviors at a young age. As part of these activities, students learned about earning, spending, and setting a saving goal. In addition, each student was given a piggy bank to decorate to encourage them to save their pennies.

Dakota Heritage Bank (Gackle), First Community Credit Union (Napoleon and Wishek), Stock Growers Bank, McIntosh County Bank (Ashley and Zeeland), Farm Credit Services of Mandan (Wishek), and Hometown Credit Union (Ashley) are sponsoring a Piggy Bank Pageant in their Logan and McIntosh County locations. The piggy banks will be on display throughout April. To "VOTE" in the Piggy Bank Pageant featuring banks decorated by area first grade students, place a coin in your favorite piggy bank. "Votes" will be tallied at the end of the month to determine the winners, and the results will be announced in the Logan and McIntosh county newspapers.

approve the permits. The motion was seconded by Sally Caudillo. All voted in favor.

2022 BUDGET ADJUSTMENTS

The council reviewed recommended transfers and adjustments to the year end balance sheet for the 2022 year. Adjustments recommended were as follows.

Transfer $60,000.00 from C.I. sales Tax to Highway Fund

Transfer $20,000.00 from Water Fund to General for New Shop payments

Transfer $10,000.00 from Parks & Rec Sales Tax to Water Fund for Glen's salary

Transfer $10,000.00 from Highway Fund to Sewer Fund for Ron's salary

Transfer $20,000.00 from Garbage Fund to Sewer Fund for Ron's salary

Transfer of Surcharges from Sewer Fund of $3,930.02 to General Fund for Mosquito Control, and $11,790.06 to Highway Fund for Street Lights

The city had also received American Recovery Act funds in the amount of $87,908.49 to be used for infrastructure improvements before the 2024 year. During 2022 we were given the option to put the funds in the general fund to allow for lost income during the pandemic. So it was recommended that we transfer those funds from the ARPA fund to the general account at this time.

After the discussion a motion was made by Rick Gutschmidt to approve the recommended transfers and adjustments to the year end 2022 balance sheet. The motion was seconded by Michelle Berry. On a roll call vote all voted in favor.

SERVICE CONTRACT WITH BUTLER MACHINERY

Bruce Mathias was present to explain a contract for service for the new pay loader. They now have a program that will monitor the hours remotely and when 500 hours is put on the machine they will come out and change oils, fluids and filters. They offered different ways to pay for the service. The annual payment for the service was $2,426.00. They also offer an hourly rate of equipment usage at $4.85 per hour. The council felt that using the service would be beneficial and a recommendation was made to go with the hourly rate. A motion was made by Rick Gutschmidt to approve the recommendation. The motion was seconded by Stefan Schoenfelder. On a roll call vote all voted in favor.

LIBRARY BOARD APPOINTMENT

Michelle Berry has been representing the council on the library board but her allowable time to serve was up so a new appointment was necessary. Mayor Triepke recommended Dan Schlosser be the new member. A motion was made by Sally Caudillo and seconded by Preston Sitzmann to approve Dan to serve on the board. All voted in favor.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

The employee committee recommended that wage increases be given to Ron and Glen in the amount of 6%. They also recommended that we increase the amount we pay Garritt Irey for Sandi's service to the city in the amount of $100.00 per month. After some discussion a motion was made by Rick Gutschmidt to approve the increase in wages. The motion was seconded by Dan Schlosser. On a roll call vote all voted in favor.

OTHER BUSINESS

The current plan to take action on properties in poor condition will be put on hold until spring. The snow pusher that was purchased in December was not working out well for us so it was recommended that we sell it. A motion was made by Preston Sitzmann and seconded by Stefan Schoenfelder to sell it. On a roll call vote all voted in favor. The garbage truck has been put in the shop a few times to thaw out air lines. A recommendation of how to charge him for placing the truck in the shop will be brought to the next meeting. Some discussion was held on the electronics that are collected at the shop. The concern was taking up space and the cost to have it picked up. It was pointed out that we have been providing that service along with the use of the landfill for disposal of other types of materials to be included in the garbage rates.

There was no other business at this time and a motion was made by Rick Gutschmidt to adjourn the meeting. The motion was seconded by Stefan Schoenfelder. All voted in favor.

Landscape Forest Stewardship Plan has been developed for the Turtle Mountains

By Cody Clemenson, Forest Stewardship Specialist, North Dakota Forest Service

“A unified approach to managing the forest in the Turtle Mountain region of North Dakota has come to fruition with the completion of the Turtle Mountain Landscape Forest Stewardship Plan.”

A unified approach to managing the forest in the Turtle Mountain region of North Dakota has come to fruition with the completion of the Turtle Mountain Landscape Forest Stewardship Plan. As one would imagine, these precious forest resources are essential to an agency like the North Dakota Forest Service. However, these forested resources are critical to many others, including other agencies, businesses, and stakeholders throughout the state. That is why a group of invested individuals were tasked with writing a cross-boundary Forest Stewardship Plan encompassing the entire Turtle Mountain Region in North Dakota. The plan's goal is to establish the current baseline condition of the forested resource and identify mutual goals for future forested conditions. This plan will improve and promote the legacy of the Turtle Mountain landscape and capture what it means to all who live, visit, and recreate in the region.

Anyone who has traveled to the Turtle Mountain region of the state would understand why the Turtle Mountain region was chosen for the state's first Landscape Forest Stewardship Plan. For those unfamiliar, this region is a place unlike anywhere else in North Dakota, with an aspen and birch forest that makes you think you are in another state. This forest system needs regular management to sustain its ecological importance and unique wildlife habitat qualities, which are essential elements of the forest to different stakeholders.

The group that worked on the plan was comprised of the North Dakota Forest Service, North Dakota Game and Fish, Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa, North Dakota State University Extension, and various other regional stakeholders. These agencies and individuals were concerned about the decline in the forest due to insufficient management in the region. This decline can be attributed to a decrease in timber harvested for home heating that once effectively maintained the ecological balance over previous generations.

After over a year of collaboration, the Turtle Mountain Landscape Forest Stewardship Plan is complete. The plan developed various goals and objectives to promote a healthy forest for future generations while continuing to provide multiple uses, like fantastic recreational opportunities, wildlife habitat for the ever-elusive ruffed grouse, and maintaining a safe and resilient forest for years to come.

For readers interested in learning more about the plan, it can be found at www.ag.ndsu.edu/ndfs. Scroll to the bottom of the page and find it under the quick links section, labeled “Turtle Mountain Landscape Forest Stewardship Plan. Indigenous scholars spearhead movement for truth and equity in education

By Adrianna Adame

Buffalo's Fire

“Show me the data,” said Stephanie Fryberg, organizer of a new conference dedicated to promoting what she calls “data sovereignty” in a society where “data has been systemically weaponized against Indigenous Peoples.”

Amidst a startling backdrop where 87% of state history standards in the U.S. fail to mention

American Indian history post-1900, the inaugural Indigenous Truths Rising: Social Action & Equity Conference, or RISE Conference, for short, challenged narratives and fostered vital conversations on education reform. The RISE Conference is an initiative of the RISE Center, based at Northwestern University.

American Indian researchers and educators discussed the urgent need for data “by Indigenous People, for Indigenous People.” They decried the damage caused by Western research methods through erasure, racism and exploitation of Native people.

Around 150 attendees participated in the three-day conference from March 11-13 at the Tulalip Resort and Casino in Tulalip, Wash. The first evening consisted of a welcome reception, along with another two days of full sessions. Three tracks focused on education, invisibility and Missing and Murdered Indigenous People/Violence. An additional session, “Democracy is Indigenous,” included a training workshop by the Center for Native American Youth to encourage data decolonization.

According to Fryberg’s website, the conference aimed to help attendees “Walk away with resources, talking points, and more in dialogue directly with the lead scientists who can support your work in law and policy, education, tribal sovereignty, and social justice.”

Sarah Shear, an associate professor at the University of Washington-Bothell’s School of Educational Studies and speaker at the conference, has researched each one of the 50 states’ curriculum standards. Shear held the session “For Future Generations: A Call for Anti-Colonial Commitments in Social Studies Curriculum.” Her presentation showcased her data from three national curriculum studies on the inclusions and erasures of Indigenous peoples in social studies education.

Before she entered academia, Shear worked as a K-12 government teacher. In that role, students have asked her some surprising questions, including whether American Indians ever lived in Missouri. Based on that experience, Shear realized the importance of featuring contemporary American Indian history and issues in schools.

Indigenous scholars spearhead movement for truth and equity in education, Cont.,

“We have an overwhelming percentage of non-Native people who only conceive of Indigenous peoples in the distant past,” Shear said.

According to a study Shear conducted, 87% of K-12 U.S. history standards explicitly include Indigenous content only in a pre-1900 context. At the time of her research’s publication, 40% of U.S. civics and government standards stated that Indigenous nationhood is situated in a pre-1900 context.

Eventually, this led Shear to ask bigger questions about the curriculum, which brought the former government teacher to her doctoral studies at the University of Missouri. “Well if the curriculum guide is not going to be helping any of us learn about the governments who we are neighbors with, I’m not too sure what we are doing here and I’m not sure why I’m a government teacher.”

Iloradanon Efimoff, an assistant social psychology professor at Toronto Metropolitan University, held an education-track session on Reducing Anti-Indigenous Racism Through Education. The presentation consisted of five different studies over four years as a part of her dissertation on racism towards Indigenous peoples.

The first was an interview study where Efimoff talked to Indigenous students about their experiences with racism, so she could create an intervention to address the issue. Then Efimoff surveyed 400 Indigenous students to continue learning about how modern and systemic racism affected them. In another study, she asked non-Indigenous people about what they wanted to learn about in terms of Native culture. The last two studies included experiments that taught participants about interpersonal racism, which focused on the empathy and feelings non-Natives felt about Indigenous people after they learned about Canada’s residential schools.

Efimoff, a citizen of the Haida Nation in Canada, knew this would be a tough topic to immerse herself in. “I think the most difficult part was constantly being face-to-face with these racist realities,” said Efimoff. “And you experience them as you move through the world. Sometimes, I think it just weighs down on you emotionally, psychologically and spiritually. But I think that I managed because I had an amazing circle of support.”

Shear blames the lack of a well-rounded social studies education for contributing to misinformation about the history of Indigenous Peoples. “Social studies education nationwide is failing to provide teachers the training and students the ability to not only learn accurately but to learn from an anti-colonial frame and Indigenous educators,” Shear said.

A recurring theme during the sessions was the perception that all of the problems in education are interconnected.

According to Efimoff, the main takeaway is the importance of teaching the ways in which systemic racism works, and the fact that it’s a recurring problem. “We have hundreds of years of settler colonialism that have created these structures that have caused all of this harm,” said Efimoff. “So we need to be consistently and intentionally teaching people the truth so that they can move themselves away from those ideas — so that we can all move forward together.”

While eliminating the effects of systemic racism will require generations to complete, there are steps people can take along the way to address this ongoing challenge. It matters who’s in the room, said Shear, and Indigenous educators need to be heard.

“A lot of people who end up on state writing committees for these state standards have never set foot in a classroom before,” Shear said. There is a need for Indigenous and non-Indigenous educators to curate curriculum, she said, rather than officials without the background experience.

Efimoff’s advice to researchers and the audience is to do something that will make a difference. “For the researchers out there, it’s really important that the work we do has applied practical outcomes,” said Efimoff. “But our research can’t just contribute to theory, it needs to contribute to changing the world — to making it a better, safer and cleaner place for everybody involved.”

...Due to Kramlich’s strong performance at that camp, he was invited to attend the NBC National Combine. “It was fun to play with so many passionate and talented athletes,” said Kramlich. He says he keeps up with a lot of the friends he made, and they celebrate each other’s success and achievements. Frank Rojas, Director of the National Combine for the past 13 years, was at the Naples camp and saw Kramlich’s work ethic, talent, and attitude. “You don’t have to tell him twice,” Rojas said of Kramlich. “He was very coachable, very competitive, he knew what he had to improve on, and he did it,” said Rojas.

“I knew he needed to be at the combine after I saw him at camp, and he proved me right! He took it to another level.” When the combine ended and test results started going out, Kramlich began receiving offers. It has only been a few weeks, but he has already received official offers to play for Arkansas State University and the University of Connecticut.

Kramlich did an incredible job representing his state, his school, and his community. Not only did he test exceptionally well in his skills, he also was awarded Best All-Around Athlete out of the nation’s top 600 high school football players, and he was the first participant from ND to win any award. (We are feeling some serious hometown pride!!!!) Congratulations Joe!

North Dakota Game and Fish Department

By Doug Leier

We live in a world of point, click, instant access and information. Patience is a rare commodity, but when it comes to hunting and fishing, it's not an option. Waiting for the right deer or the hot bite is as important as finding the right lure or spot.

In the same way, maintaining, enhancing and growing wildlife populations like deer and pheasants is a long-term investment. It's not practical to think simply stocking fish or dumping food for wildlife is much more than a short-term feel good at best -- more likely a poor investment of time, money and resources.

Habitat is planned, planted and established. While many farmers, ranchers and landowners enjoy the wildlife, it's also a little presumptuous to just expect investing time, fuel and equipment to establish food plots.

With that in mind, the North Dakota Game and Fish Department is offering free seed for the 2024 growing season to landowners interested in planting wildlife food plots for pheasants.

Rather than a traditional corn or sunflower food plot, this seed mix increases plant diversity, including flowering plants from spring through fall, which will attract insects, the major diet component of pheasant chicks. Additionally, the mix will provide needed cover during spring and summer, as well as a winter food source. Other wildlife species will also benefit from this mix.

Most Game and Fish food plots are part of the department's Private Land Open To Sportsmen program, but this food plot campaign does not require a PLOTS contract, but the department is asking participating landowners to allow reasonable public access, which could simply mean providing access to hunters from time to time, putting up "Ask Before You Enter" signs around the area, or not posting the surrounding land. Also, landowners participating in this promotion cannot charge a fee for hunting.

The goal is to put a small piece of the habitat component on the landscape. Think of this as a small investment spread out across the state as Game and Fish will provide enough seed for a maximum 5-acre planting at no cost. There's no cap on the number of food plots statewide. Landowners interested in receiving the food plot seed must sign up online by April 5. Seed will be available in April at Game and Fish offices in Bismarck, Jamestown, Devils Lake, Harvey, Dickinson, Williston and Riverdale.

If you've never thought about it and are a little hesitant on the technical aspects, Game and Fish private land biologists can provide expert assistance on food plot location and site preparation.

Landowners interested in additional financial incentives may be considered for the PLOTS program as well. More information is available by contacting a private land biologist at any Game and Fish office in the state, or email ndgfb@nd.gov.

One last point: Don't think because you're not a landowner this doesn't apply to you. If you hunt or enjoy wildlife and know of a landowner who may not know about the program, it may be well worth your time to drop them a line and let them know. What's the worst they can say?

Report Bald Eagle Nest Sightings

The North Dakota Game and Fish Department is asking for help locating active bald eagle nests.

Conservation biologist Sandra Johnson said the department is looking for locations of nests with eagles present, not individual eagle sightings.

Eagles lay eggs in early to mid-March, which hatch about a month later. Johnson said it's easy to distinguish an eagle nest because of its enormous size.

Nearly 350 active bald eagle nests can be found in 47 of the 53 counties in the state.

Historically, Johnson said nests were found along river corridors, but that's not the case today, as bald eagles will nest in trees in the middle of pastures, fields or anywhere near a food source.

Nest observations should be reported online at the Game and Fish website, gf.nd.gov. Observers are asked not to disturb the nest, and to stay a safe distance away. Johnson said foot traffic may disturb the bird, likely causing the eagle to leave her eggs or young unattended.

Deer Gratis Application Online

Landowners interested in a 2024 deer gratis license must apply online by visiting the North Dakota Game and Fish Department website, gf.nd.gov. The deadline for applying is June 5.

General deer and muzzle-loader lottery applications will be available online in early May, also with a deadline of June 5.

Gratis applicants who have previously applied online will automatically have their land description forwarded to this year's application. However, any changes with land descriptions from last year's application must be made prior to submitting the 2024 application.

DAKOTA EDGE OUTDOORS

Our Outdoors: Marvelous Marabou

By Nick Simonson

In the coldest waters of spring, every bit of realism, enticement, and apparent edibility a lure can project is an advantage to anglers. That's why, as the last few handfuls of lures come together on my vise ahead of the open water season, whisks of marabou pile up in drifts of red, white, chartreuse, and olive on the wood of my desk and attach themselves to the seams of my blue jeans like mini-Velcro. As one of my favorite materials, it comprises at least some part of many of those offerings I'll first throw out there after the ice comes off and crappies, walleyes, trout and smallmouth bass present themselves in those early forays on open water.

Through Thick and Thin On the vise, marabou is big, puffy and moves with the slightest breath of air, a property that's evident by the line of different colored feather fibers amassed along the edge of the small hook box on the far side of my tying station. In the crappie and walleye jigs and the woolly bugger and other streamers I tie for spring trout, it looks like a large skirt, wrapped tight at the collar, or where the tail forms on a pattern, tapering from small to big like a swing dancer's skirt.

In the water, however, marabou takes on a different but no less attractive shape. Once wet, the fibers cling together in an elongated form taking on the profile of a leech or small minnow. With a twitch and a pull, they pulse together providing one of the ultimate fish-triggering motions under the surface; the illusion of a meal that's about to make a desperate spurt to get away from the jaws of the predator lurking behind it. While dry marabou lures already look cool, but underwater their attractiveness is amplified in a different way, going from puffy and thick to thin and jumpy in that fragment of a second it takes to soak them. At times, unable to wait to see how a certain pattern looks, I'll run some water in the sink or fill a large glass measuring cup and dunk a newly-crafted lure to get an idea of how a brown trout, bass or bluegill will see it once it sinks beneath the surface.

Added or Alone

So versatile and attractive, marabou makes up at least part of many of the patterns I tie each spring. From burner bucktails for pike and muskies with woven balls of brightly dyed marabou feathers anchored on a metal coil above a 5/0 treble hook to 1/32-ounce jigs tipped with natural tails of gray, brown and cream from the bottom of a rooster pheasant, my supply is often depleted down to stumps of clipped feather quills and the choicest parts of last fall's pelt nearly bald from use. In some instances, I make a simple crappie jig from just a triangle of the undulating feathers tied in around the collar with seven or eight wraps going back. Other times, I make a short delta of a tail at the end of a chenille body, and in many cases as the season goes along, both are effective choices for the green-sided panfish.

One of the neat things to try each spring is a variety of color combinations, whether that's the feathers and the body material, or the matching of two hues of marabou in a single skirt. Sometimes I go with black-and-yellow for a killer bee pattern, or brown and olive for a leech. Orange and purple make for a fun hyper crayfish, while traditional red and white provide the confidence that at least a pike will take to the bunch of beautiful tufts aligned at the end of a lure. In the end, some of the combos become staples in next season's pattern list, and others just provide a wild look in the water which makes me wonder why only I like it and the fish don't.

The final wraps are going on the jigs and streamers making their way to my spring tackle collection, and the last viable fibers of marabou comprise their tails. Whether you craft your lures by hand or pick them up from the displays at your favorite tackle shop, this springtime staple is an important one for its amazing effects on fish in chilly waters -- and really, any time of year. Create or purchase those marabou offerings you think will tempt fish of all types and traits this spring, and you're likely to find a key ingredient to angling success for many species...in our outdoors.

Simonson is the lead writer and editor of Dakota Edge Outdoors.

Social Security Matters
by AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor Russell Gloor, Association of Mature American Citizens
Ask Rusty-How will working affect my first year's benefits?

Dear Rusty:
I retired from working in January of this year and have since claimed Social Security. I didn't work at all in February or March, but I began a part time job in April. I'm very confused about how Social Security counts earnings for the first year. I don't know if I need to keep each month's earnings under $1,770 or if they average it. Some of the literature I've found says each month must remain under $1,770 or NO benefit will be paid that month. Two people at the Social Security office told me that they'll just dock me $1 for every $2 I am over that, even in my first year. I also cannot find anything about when they count your income. Is it when it's earned or when it's paid? If I go over in a month because there are three pay periods, can they withhold the benefit for that month? I'm just so confused!

Signed:
Part Time Worker
Dear Part Time Worker:

The Social Security earnings test during your first year collecting benefits before full retirement age is, indeed, somewhat confusing. The reason is because there are two methods which Social Security may use during your first calendar year collecting early benefits, and they will use the one which results in the least financial impact to you. To elaborate:

If you claim benefits mid-year before your full retirement age, for the remainder of that first year (starting in the month benefits begin and ending in December) you'll be subject to a monthly earnings limit ($1,770 for 2023). If you exceed the monthly limit in any remaining month of that first calendar year, you won't be entitled to benefits for that month, so Social Security would (eventually) take back that month's benefit. That is, unless using the annual limit ($21,240 for 2023) instead will result in a smaller penalty. If your total earnings for your first year collecting are over the annual limit (e.g., $21,240 for 2023), the penalty would be $1 for every $2 over the annual limit and, if that is less than the penalty from using the monthly limit, they will assess the smaller penalty. In other words, Social Security will use the method which is most beneficial to you when assessing a penalty for exceeding the earnings limit during your first calendar year collecting benefits. And just for clarity, the earnings limits are much higher and the penalty less during the year you attain full retirement age (FRA).
Something else to be aware of: if you know in advance you will exceed the annual limit it would be best to inform Social Security in order to avoid an Overpayment Notice next year. If you don't, Social Security won't know about your 2023 earnings until you file your 2023 income taxes, so you'll get your 2023 monthly payments as usual. But when the IRS informs Social Security of your 2023 earnings later next year, Social Security will ask you to detail your monthly work earnings for 2023. If you have exceeded the limits, they will determine an overpayment amount and will ask you to either pay back what is owed in a lump sum or will withhold your benefits for enough months to recover what you owe for exceeding the 2023 earnings limit. Then, after you reach full retirement age (FRA), you'll get time credit for all months in which benefits were withheld, thus slightly increasing your monthly payment after your FRA.

Finally, it is when your income is earned that counts, not when it is paid. So, for example, if you worked in January 2023 and were paid for that work in February 2023, that is considered January income which wouldn't count toward the February earnings limit.
